Touch her not scornfully;

Thick of her mournfully, Gently, and humanly; Not of the stains of her;

All that remains of her Now, is pure womanly.

Make no deep scratiny

Into her metiny, Rash and undutiful;

Past all dishonor, Death has left on her

Only the beautiful.

Still, for all slips of hers, One of Eve's family,
Wipe those poor lips of hers,
Dozing so clammily,
Look on her tressee,

E-caped from the comb,

Her feir auburn tresses; Whilst wonderment guesses, Where was her home.

Who was her father?

Who was her mother? Had she a sister?

Had she a brother?

Still, and a nearer one Yet, than all other?

Alas, for the rarity Of Christian charity

Under the sun! O, it was pitiful! Near a whole city full, Home she had rone.

Sisterly brotherly.

Fatherly, motherly Feelings had changed:

Seeming estranged.

Where the lamps quiver

So far in the river,
With many a light,
From windows and casement,

From garret to basement,

The bleak wind of March

But not the dark arch, Or the black flowing river.

Mad from life's history, Glad to death's mystery Swift to be hurled;

Any where-any where,

Out of the world!

In ske plunged boldly,

No matter how coldly

The rough river ran; Over the brink of it, Picture it, think of it,

Dissolute man!

Lave in it, drink of it.

Then, if you can! Take her up tenderly, Lift her with care:

Fashioned so slenderly,

Young, and so fair !

Ere her limbs frigidly Stiffen too rigidly, Decently, kindly,

Smooth and compose them; And her eyes, close them, Staring so blindly!

Through muddy impurity, As when with the daring

Perishing gloomily, Spurned by contumely, Cold inhumanity, Burning insanity,

Into her rest! Cross her hands humbly,

Her evil behavior; And leaving, with meekness, Her sins to her Savier!

Shall we be told by the critic that every expression in this poem is the plainest, most trenchant prose? We answer, it is not the less a po-

PROEM.
The day is done, and the darkness
Falls from the wirgs of Night,
As a feather is waited downward
From an engle in its flight. I see the lights of the village Glean through the rain and the mist, And a feeling of sadness comes o'er me, That my soul cannot resist;

A feeling of sadness and longing, That is not akin to pain, And resembles sorrow only
As the mist resembles the rain. Come, read to me some poem,

Some simple and heart-felt lay, That shall soothe this restless feeling, And banish the thoughts of day. Not from the grand old masters. Not from the bards sublime, Whose distant footsteps echo Through the corridors of time,

For, like strains of martial music, Their mighty thoughts suggest Life's endless toil and endeavor; And to-night I long for rest. Read from some humbler poet,
Whose songs gushed from his heart,
As showers from the clouds of summer,

Octoors from the evulids start: Who, through long days of labor, And nights devoid of case, Still heard in his soul the music Of wonderful melodies. 1 Such songs have power to quiet

The restless pulse of Care, And come like the benediction That follows after prayer. Then read from the treasured volume

The beauty of thy voice. And the night shall be filled with music. And the cares that infest the day, Shall fold their tents, like the Arabs, And as silently steel away.

We cannot but feel some surprise that a witer of so cultivated taste and judgment as Mr. Longfellow should not perceive the inadequacy of the image in the first verse to express his meaning. He is seduced by the pretty pic. twenf the fall of a feather from the black eagle. pretty in itself, but neither by the nature of the motion, nor in any other way, giving the same impression as the fall of night.

We regret this one fault, as every other image, throughout the poem, is as apt as it is beautiful. Just so in that called "The Gleam of Sunhine" in "The Gift" of this year which atbacted us more, from its grace and tenderness, than almost any thing of Mr. Longfellow's ever did. There is one failure of the same kind :

'The Past and Present reunite, Beneath Time's floating tide, Like footprints, hidden by a brook, But seen on either side.

Here, again, a charming picture is presented to the fancy, but one which does not fulfil the purpose of representing the mental fact. For the present is not a path already trodden on the other de of the brook whose bridge we are crossing. This is the best selection of poems we have sen. All are good, many excellent, and amid the variety there is an unity of purpose and feel. ing such as makes us enjoy a private picture. allery, belonging to a man of refined judgment, more than the treasures of the most splendid pubictemple of Art. We extremely regret that the volume did not make its appearance here earlier; it would have been a more valuable present from field to friend than any we have seen provided

Almost all the poems are familiar to ourself, be we meet them again with great pleasure; and we presume that, to many, who have not had the same convenient access to books, most of those from the older writers, and several from betemporaries, will be new. To all such of pur native feeling acquaintance with those here girm from Marvel, Crashaw, Lovelace, Quarles and Herrick, will be a treasure.

Wewill mention, as among the most beautiful of these, "The Drop of Dew" by Marvel, "The Grasshopper"by Lovelace, "Primroses" by Herrick, and "Sweet Phospher bring the Day" by Quarles-Defollowing was a new delight to us:

THEY ARE ALL GONE ... BY HENRY VAUGHAN. They are all gone into a world of light.

And I alone sit lingering here:
Their very memory is fair and bright,
And my and thoughts doth clear.

li glows and glitters in my cloudy breast, Like stars upon some gloomy grove, or those faint beams in which the hill is dressed. And the sun's remove.

I see them walking in an air of glory,
Whose light doth trample on my days,
My days, which are at best but dull and hoary,
Mere glimsserings and decays.

Obely bope, and high humility, high as the heavens above! These are your walks, and ye have showed them me, To kindle my cold love.

Der, beauteons Death! the jewel of the just! Saming no where but in the dark; What mysteries do lie beyond thy dust, Coole man outlook that mark!

Hethet hath found some fledged bird's nest may knew.
At flast sight if the bird be flown;
But what fair field or grove he sings in now.
That is to him unknown.

And yet, as angels, in some brighter dreams, Calls to the soul, when man doth sleep, So some strange thoughts transcend our wonted the And into glory peep.

Among the modern poems, we especially like "The Song of the Forge," "Kulnasatz," (this however is only modern as a translation,) "The Awakening of Endymion,' the exquisite "Lily of Nithsdale," "Night among the Alps," and Hood's two poems. We wish several others from Hood had been added, which are little known, such as "The Peasant Lover." One of the two we will give as possessing the same force and justness of feeling and touch that have made others, lately written by Hood, so popular.

"THE BRIDGE OF SIGHS." One more unfortunate, Weary of breath, Rashly importunate, Gone to her death! Take her up tenderly,

Lift her with care; Fashioned so slenderly Young and so fair. Look at her garments Clinging like cerements, Whilst the wave constantly

Drips from her clothing;
Take her up instantly,
Loving, not loathing.

THE GREAT REMEDY

for January opens with an article on Geology, showing the incensistencies of the hypotheses of the various eminent Geologists designed to account for the formation and structure of the earth, and contending for the literal verity of the Mosaic Record Rev. H. Ballou has a paper on the influence of our conduct in this world on our character and destiny in the fature State; and the Editor (H. Ballou, 2d) drives very hard at Fourierism, which he handles after the usual manner of its contemners. We regret that he does not see fit to begin at the beginning and give us his views on the necessity of a Social Reform and the character of a true one. After this, we could more easily judge whether any proposed plan appears to meet the wan's of the case, and wherein it fails to do so. Until this is done, picking flaws here and there in the schemes of particular reformers is a rather upprofitable undertaking. It is substantially the Pharisce's mode of

The DEMOCRATIC REVIEW for January has, for a wonder, one really Democratic article-a dissertation on Social evils headed 'What is the Reason?' We wish all who have souls to feel for the destitute could read this peble and generous essay. The leading article is on The Abolitionists-very shallow and not at all just. The writer gives the Abolitionists several lots of good advice, for which they doubtless are adequately grateful. (Langley, Astor House.)

THE WESTERN LITERARY JOURNAL AND MONTHLY REVIEW No. III. for January, is filled with articles of abiding and substantial interest, from the pens of H. A. Kidd, Mrs. Welby, Mrs. R. S. Nichols, Col. C. The Moon.

To the Editor of The Tribune:
In the Morning Tribune of the 10th I noticed some remarks regarding the Moon, the philosophy of which appears to me to be altogether erroncou-It is capable of easy demonstration that the Moon has no atmosphere: the matter has been proved over and over again; it has received the sanction of the perly examined the subject will now deny it. It is equally well established that there are upon the surface of the Moon voicances in an active state of eroption. The clearest proof of this is that during eclipses of that body they have actually been seen. Of course when there is a full bright light upon our satellite, they cannot be perceived, but when she is dark many of these bright spots are said to appear.
